Do I need to prepare for HPAT?

Yes! Many practicing doctors agree that HPAT is the most difficult test they faced in their medical career. Even students who obtain leaving cert points of 625 have missed out on a place in medicine due to a poor HPAT score. It is completely different to any other test you have sat at school. Quality preparation is therefore essential.

HPAT prep will also help with your school study as it enhances your thinking and test-taking skills.

But ACER/unis discourage HPAT preparation

There are many reasons for this. For example, the more you know about HPAT, the harder their job becomes. They also want a level playing field where all students have the same level of preparation for HPAT. Unfortunately, this does not exist. Informed and motivated students will prepare for HPAT, and MedEntry provides quality materials to help them do so.

What HPAT score do I need to get into medicine?

The minimum points required to get into medicine varies from year to year and between universities.

Entry into medicine is based on the addition of:

- Your Leaving Certificate points
- Your HPAT overall score

Most students will need to achieve a HPAT score of at least 70th percentile to gain entry into medicine, depending on their Leaving Certificate points. This may sound easily achievable, however, remember you are competing against medicine hopefuls who are highly intelligent and motivated. Being in the top 30% of this cohort is challenging, so quality preparation is essential.
