What is UCAT?

UCAT (previously known as UKCAT) stands for University Clinical Aptitude Test. To enter most medical schools in the United Kingdom, you will need to succeed in the UCAT. The UCAT is a two hour computer based test consisting of multiple-choice questions. It is divided into four separately timed subtests: Verbal Reasoning, Decision Making, Quantitative Reasoning and Situational Judgement.

You can sit UCAT in the time between year 12 and year 13 and then any year thereafter.

Do I need to prepare for UCAT?

Yes! The UCAT is a skills based test which is completely different to any other test you have sat at school. It is a very difficult, time pressured exam. Even students who obtain perfect secondary school or university grades can miss out on a place in medicine due to poor UCAT scores. Quality preparation is therefore essential. UCAT preparation will also help with your school study as it enhances your thinking and test-taking skills.

Aren't free UCAT resources sufficient?

No! Universities do not want you to undertake quality additional preparation, because they want a level playing field. Unfortunately, this does not exist. Informed and motivated students will always prepare for UCAT, and MedEntry provides premium UCAT resources to assist. Further, free resources often do not accurately simulate the live UCAT.

Free resources will not provide you with feedback or predicted scores, which are essential to improve your performance. MedEntry uses Personalised Adaptive Feedback technology to individualise your UCAT preparation, helping you to track your progress and identify your weaknesses.

What UCAT score do I need to get into medicine?

The UCAT score that you need to get into medicine or other health science courses depends on the university to which you are applying. The higher your UCAT score, the greater your chances of being admitted into your chosen degree. UCAT scores can be very important in the medical admissions process. Remember: you are competing against a much tougher cohort than at school/university.
